Jerzy Flisak was a Polish graphic artist, illustrator, and scenographer, well-known for his drawings and posters. He graduated from the Warsaw University of Technology [Politechnika Warszawska] with a diploma in architecture. His drawings were published in various weeklies, including Szpilki [Scores], where he was the graphic editor, Polityka [Politics], Świat [The World], Przegląd Kulturalny [The Cultural Review], and periodicals aimed at children, such as Świerszczyk [The Little Cricket] and Płomyczek [The Little Flame]. For Świerszczyk he created a popular comic column Co robi nasz Bobik [What's Up with Our Bobik] about an amusing dog that children liked the most (see here and here, accessed: April 7, 2022). Jerzy Flisak was also the author of illustrations for many children's books creating his own style. He worked as well for Short Film Forms Studio Se-Ma-For in Łódź and Animated Cartoons Studio SFR in Bielsko-Biała.

Summary	Based on: Katarzyna Marciniak, Elżbieta Olechowska, Joanna Kłos, Michał Kucharski (eds.), Polish Literature for Children &amp; Young Adults Inspired by Classical Antiquity: A Catalogue , Faculty of "Artes Liberales", Warsaw: University of Warsaw, 2013, 444 pp.  This is the second volume in the series The Legacy of Antiquity , based on radio programs and plays for children, where the author explains phrases, sayings, and expressions originating from Greek myths, such as "the sufferings of Tantalus", "an apple of discord", "the Trojan Horse", etc. The author applies a pattern: first, a discussion of the myth at the origin of the term or phrase, then a reflection on each entry's meaning and modern usage in a dramatized scene with children as characters.

Analysis	After the success of Historie nie z tej ziemi , where seven mythical plots interwoven with contemporary stories were introduced to children, this volume focuses on the phrases that originated in myths. The book was inspired by a letter, which the author recounts in the Introduction. When the author was writing programs about antiquity for Polish Radio, a girl wrote her a letter asking questions about the expression "Achilles's heel", explaining that she could not find where it came from. The letter made the author realise that there was a need for a publication aimed at children that explains the origins of phrases or expressions concerning classical antiquity and their current meaning. At the time of the book's first edition, there was no Internet and only a limited access to lexicons and encyclopaedias. In this context, the letter from the medium-size south-eastern city of Nowy Sącz reflected the real needs of children. Anna Komornicka - a professor of classics and full-time mother - wrote a book that met young readers' expectations, explained in contemporary language phrases rooted in Greek and Roman myths and/or history, and provided amusing stories about children, relatable and easy to understand. This device allowed the author to pursue her didactic goal: children were having fun learning about the origins and use of words by witnessing short scenes set at school or home.

The book is divided into almost 50 concise chapters. Each has its leitmotiv – a word, an idea, a sentence or a quotation originating in ancient myths. The “mythical” part features storytelling well adapted to children; key issues of the myth are explained without the use of archaic language. The second part of each chapter usually presents a short scene with children as protagonists set in the contemporary world, usually at school or at home. However, some of the stories have a detective nature. The storytelling follows the Socratic method – the described short scene leads to a conclusion that is not explicitly stated but is readily apparent. Adding to the book’s educational value, the author also cites modern and ancient authors, including Homer, Plutarch, Ovid, Hyginus, and others.

A characteristic feature of Komornicka’s writing style is alternating between funny, serious and reflective themes. For example, topics based on authentic events, in Beczka Danaid [The Barrel of the Danaïdes], an older man tells his grandchildren about his harrowing experiences in a concentration camp during WW2; Wierna Penelopa [Faithful Penelope] features a war widow and a letter from her late husband, a prisoner of KL Sachsenhausen; Odyseja [The Odyssey] presents the post-war fate of another Polish soldier, and Parki – Moiry przedą nić ludzkiego życia [Parcae – Moirai Weave the Thread of Mortal Life] shows school children on a field trip through the Powązki Cemetery in Warsaw, where they learn about Polish patriotic history.
